The city of Detroit, in the USA, was once compared to Paris. It had a broad river, smart streets and historically important architecture. Then, in the 20th century, it became ‘Motor City’. For a time, most of the world’s cars were made there. There was regular work and a good salary in the motor industry. A worker at one of the car factories could own a home, plus a boat, maybe even a holiday cottage. Some say America’s middle class was born in Detroit.

B
But in the early years of the 21st century, Detroit became America’s poorest big city. In less than five decades the once lively Motor City lost more than half its population. And this fell for several reasons, partly because people moved to the suburbs in the 1950s. Then there were the violent protests in 1967, which scared more people away from the city. Then there was the dramatic fall in car manufacture, as companies like General Motors and Chrysler faced huge difficulties. And finally, in 2008, came the global financial crisis and the city got into debt.

C
Now that the city is free of debt again, it has money to do some of what needs to be done. It has replaced about 40,000 streetlights so that places feel safer. And about a hundred empty houses are demolished each week to make space for new buildings. Detroit is also attracting investors and young adventurers. It seems that every week a new business opens in Detroit – grocery stores, juice bars, coffee shops, even bicycle makers. Finally, the city is working again.
